

This publication is the result of the research project entitled "European institutional models as instruments of conflict resolution in the divided states of the European periphery: a comparative study", financed by the Belgian Federal Science Policy Office within the framework of the programme "Transversal actions: Action I: Belgian public institutions and decision-making in a globalized society". The programme managers are: Bogdan Van doninck, Lieve Van Daele, Aziz Naji, Margarida Freire and Sven Vrielinck.

The project was carried out by Bruno Coppeters, Michel Huysseune and Tamara Kovziridze from the Department of Political Science of the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (Free University of Brussels, VUB), and by Michael Emerson, Gergana Noutcheva, Nathalie Tocci and Marius Vahl of the Brussels-based Centre for European Policy Studies (CEPS).

The electronic version of this study is published in English by the Journal on Ethnopolitics and Minority Issues in Europe (JEMIE), in parallel with the book version, published by Academia Press, Ghent. The study is also due to be published in Dutch, Russian and Chinese.

The opinions expressed in this book are, of course, the sole responsibility of the authors.

The Belgian Federal Science Policy Office (Federal Ministry for Science) manages an annual budget of some 533 million euro, and funds research across a broad spectrum of areas (for more information see <http://www.belspo.be/>).

The Centre for European Policy Studies (CEPS) is an independent policy research institute in Brussels. Its mission is to produce sound policy research leading to constructive solutions to the challenges facing Europe. Website: <http://www.ceps.be>.

The Department of Political Science of the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (Free University of Brussels, VUB) is engaged in research on secession, federalism and multi-level governance within a European framework. Website: <http://poli.vub.ac.be>.

The Journal on Ethnopolitics and Minority Issues in Europe (JEMIE) is a peer-reviewed electronic journal edited under the auspices of the European Centre for Minority Issues (ECMI), based in Flensburg, Germany. JEMIE is a multi-disciplinary journal, which addresses minority issues across a broad range of studies. Website: <http://www.ecmi.de/jemie/>